A Social Initiative by Custodian

In these days, with people staying physically and mentally fit well into their seventies, new retirees and even senior citizens are currently the most untapped knowledge and experience sources. They have a lifetime of knowledge and expertise and can add a wealth of experience to the workplace that can benefit the company in many ways. By providing them with short training to update them on modern computer and software tools and reemployment opportunities, the company is tapping into this valuable resource. They may have retired, but they still have a lot to give back to society and the country.
